DRAMATURGY NOTE ■

Watching Go, Dog. Go! transports me to a place of childhood memories. As I watch these various dogs transform the stage into a playground, I imagine myself playing amongst them—rolling around and dancing with friends. Suddenly I'm back in my childhood playroom, riding on my large labrador retriever, Gussie. I tumble off Gussie and join my father for a story, pointing inside the colorful pages of P.D. Eastman's children's book as he reads along with me. Go, Dog. Go! encourages this nostalgic wonder and playful riffing. This production immerses the audience in a world abounding with dogs—dogs who drive cars, play baseball, and throw festive parties. This production hopes to bring to life this canine extravaganza.

The play is about the delicious silliness of language (its sounds, its rhythms, even its movement), our innate human desire for approval, and our domestic companion, the dog. Yet it resists the idea that stories must be “about” anything at all, taking time to relish the joy of the absurd. The playwrights, Allison Gregory and Steven Dietz, elaborate: “it is not our intention to ‘fill out’ or ‘open up’ the story in the style of many traditional adaptations.” Instead, in adapting this almost wordless story for the stage, they go deeper into the text itself to celebrate the original pictures and limited words.

Because of the sparseness of language in this play, the cast created much of this show through improvised movement. The relationships and feelings between these dogs that are not based in dialogue emerge through their playful physicality with each other.

The dogs in this play have so much control over their reality. They can shift locations in an instant and create their world around them as they speak it into being. The audience has as much control here. In her Believer essay on Eastman's book, Rachel Z. Arndt says, “Meaning doesn't exist in individual sentences, or in the dogs' interactions, but in the reader's interpretation.” In this fantastical world, the audience is empowered to form its own understanding of what the embodiment of this classic children's book can mean personally. It's vibrant, nonsensical, and absolutely brimming with dogs.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Most of us have very early memories of P.D. Eastman's classic book Go, Dog. Go! Some of us, like me, have fresh and fond memories of reading it to our own children—as we snuggle in for sleep at night, or as we settle into the couch on a rainy afternoon. It's a perfect book for teaching our kids about colors, opposites, and camaraderie. The images and words really stick with you: in our family, if we walk or drive by more than two dogs congregated anywhere, we all call out "DOG PARTY!" and grin excitedly at each other while talking in the voices that we imagine the dogs might have.

In the beginning of our process making this play for you, I focused on the simplicity of this: PLAY IS IMPORTANT. And who better to teach us about play than dogs?? We need joy, silliness, and humor in our lives.

There are also some valuable social lessons in this book when you take a closer look. That poodle really wants to be part of that dog clique. She is tenacious in her efforts to convince the head dog that she belongs with them—that she can be a fun dog, too. As my son went from a three-year-old enjoying the pictures of silly dogs to a six-year-old dealing with the culture of the playground, this book became a wonderful conversation tool. We could have some pretty big talks about what it feels like to be excluded, and how difficult it is to navigate being yourself with trying to fit in. It was nice to have a simple story like this to help him talk about it.

Go, Dog. Go! can also serve as a lesson in how to get along with lots of different kinds of people. All these dogs are unique, yet they find a way to live together while honoring their differences. The big ones, the little ones, the blue ones, the spotted ones. In placing our version of the story in Chicago, I hope our city kids see themselves in these city dogs. I hope our grown-ups can re-learn from our dogs and children that communities are richly fed by a few essential acts: dance and share songs together. Really see each other. And don't forget to play.

A commitment to diversity and equality in education is central to our mission. As an integral part of the training, The Theatre School produces public programs and performances from a wide repertoire of classic, contemporary, and original plays that challenge, entertain, and stimulate the imagination. CHICAGO PLAYWORKS FOR FAMILIES AND YOUNG AUDIENCES

Chicago Playworks offers a live theatre experience to students, teachers and parents in the Chicago metropolitan area. It is our mission to provide theatre for children that reflects their experiences in a contemporary, multi-ethnic, urban environment.

Founded as the Goodman Children's Theatre in 1925, Chicago Playworks is the city's oldest continuously operating children's theatre. It has been the first theatre experience for audiences of Chicago's young people for more than seven decades and was one of the first major theatres for children in the United States. In 1997 and again in 2003, Chicago Playworks was honored by the Illinois Theatre Association with the Children's Theatre Division Award, for its outstanding long-term contribution to children's theatre. In 1980, Chicago Playworks was awarded the prestigious Sara Spencer Award by the Children's Theatre Association of America (now the American Alliance for Theatre and Education).

Chicago Playworks is a vital aspect of the training at The Theatre School at DePaul University. Students gain pre-professional experience in an extended run before a most demanding and appreciative audience. Chicago Playworks presents three unique productions to more than 35,000 young people each season and has entertained more than 1 million school children and families since 1925.

HISTORY ■

The Theatre School at DePaul University was founded as the Goodman School of Drama in 1925, made possible by a gift of $250,000 from William and Erna Goodman to the Art Institute of Chicago. The gift was in memory of their son, Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, a playwright. Kenneth dreamed about opening a theatre that combined a repertory company with a dramatic arts school, where classes would be taught by professional artists and actors.

In 1975 the trustees of the Art Institute of Chicago voted to phase out the Goodman School of Drama over a three-year period. Luckily, DePaul University stepped in and embraced the Goodman School of Drama to keep alive a tradition of dramatic programming. DePaul's first theatre, The College Theatre, opened on the Lincoln Park Campus in 1907.

Throughout the years, The Theatre School at DePaul University has grown in reputation and stature. Our home at Fullerton and Racine opened in September 2013 and was designed by the internationally renowned architect César Pelli and his firm Pelli Clarke Pelli Architects.
